Print on Demand .Born during the bitter twilight of Apartheid in South Africa, Rolf Nell often found himself at odds with the establishment and their ways and means. He was friends with and socialized with the so-called enemy and had even dated a few women of color. His grandfather Jan was his polar opposite in every sense of the word. Although he himself occasionally enjoyed a little brown sugar, he spent half a century ensuring the wheels of equality and fair treatment for all moved at a snail s pace and as a former Sergeant Major in the old South African Defense Force, The Chemist as he was known during his brutal reign was responsible for the death or disappearance of countless people. When Jan, who was a shadow of his former self was found dead under mysterious circumstances, lead detective Winters pointed the finger at Rolfs mother Elize. Elize had been beaten and brutalized by Jan from an early age and when he became ill she seemed to enjoy watching his demise. With Jan dead, Rolf was left with...
