Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Treatise on Ensilage Rye and oats and wheat in many seasons are more valuable to a dairy farmer in the ensilaged state than in the grain. Six or seven acres of the heaviest can be put into a silo, 20 12 16 feet, containing about 100 tons. These crops as well as clover can be removed in time to plant maize. We find that 910 lbs of ensilaged maize is equal in nutriment to a barrel of corn meal. Southern Cow Pea makes a very nutritious fodder, of which cattle and horses are very fond. Horses will work well upon it when ensilaged, without any grain. It grows luxuriantly, and by the system of ensilage it becomes for all parts of the country a valuable product, which it is not practicable to cure in any other way. Southern planters say that with ensilage they can produce cotton at 4 cts. lb. less cost than ever before, because it has cost more to keep a mule than a negro in these sections where grass does not grow. If this is so, the saving by ensilage in making 6,000,000 bales of cotton would be more than one hundred millions of dollars. The necessity of buying the seed from the South will of course benefit that section to that extent also; like clover, it is a great land improver, and a very cheap and profitable crop for fattening hogs. This pea, which is really a bean or lentil, is of value for shading out weeds. It is an excellent crop to plow under, as well as to feed green and for ensilage. Planted between rows of potatoes,...
