Excerpt: .and May, I enjoyed an opportunity to visit the South and West as collector for the above firm. January 1, 1883, this firm dissolved, the partners retired from active business. For the next year I was not permanently settled anywhere. During January and February, 1884, Silas Potter Co., my father and uncle, became interested in the organization of the Standard Cordage Co., and through them I have been able to obtain a most desirable position. The above company started to run about the last of June, 1884. By the first of September business had so increased that they were forced to double their number of spindles--to-day we are running two sets of workmen night and day, and are now established as the largest producers of Sisal Rope in the world--having a production of eight million pounds per year. The 5th of May I shall...
