Excerpt: . . . ther questions to ask, the girl was told she might leave the staud, which she forthwith proceeded to do. But she had barely got down out of the chair when the judge exclaimed: Hold on, there! come back! Take thai seat again. Gentlemen of the jury, do any of you wish to ask the defendant any questions, to examine her touching the condition of her mind Major Fleece expressed a desire to ask a few questions, and he did so: You say, Miss Mitchell, that you undertook to kill yourself Yes, sir. Do you feel regret that yon failed I have always wanted to do it. Do you feel that you are determined to carry out your purpose No. sir. I dont know that I will, but I want to die. It was said that you kept a thumbstall saturated with Fredas blood and yours. Do you want to have that now Would it give you pleasure to look on it Yes, sir. I think it would. That was all that was asked Alice. She stepped back to her seat behind the lawyers again, and her face wore an expression of satisfaction. The statement of the prisoner, her appearance, her emotional and non-emotional psychical changes, etc. , together with the developments that preceded, wholly disarmed the prosecution, and the case was given to the j ury without argument. The latter remained out but a few moments before agreeing to the verdict of present insanity....
