To this is added within about 20 seconds, 17 gms. acetic anhydride with vigorous stirring, by which means the amino group of the H-acid is completely acetylated. The completeness of the acetylation is determined by acidifying a small test portion of the solution with hydrochloric acid, adding a few drops sodium nitrite solution, and then mixing with an alkaline solution of H-acid. If no unchanged H-acid is present, no coloration will be produced, as no diazotizable group will be available. This compound may be coupled with various diazo components to give beautiful azo colours which are very fast to light, and which possess excellent levelling properties; with diazotized aniline, for instance, the important Aminonaphthol Red G is formed. As the acetyl group is somewhat easily hydrolysed, it is necessary to carry out the coupling with very little soda, and, in addition,...
